On October 24, 1883, a German warship carrying a negotiating delegation entered Jemulpo Port, a fishing village in Incheon.

On November 26th of the same year, Korea and Germany signed German-Korean Trade, Friendship and Shipping Agreement for economic purposes. In the 140 years since then, the relationship between the two countries has flourished with the strengthening of exchanges and cooperation in various fields, including politics, society, culture and the economy.

Despite the rapidly changing international situation, Korean and Germany will continue to be strong partners, leading the world in the future by maintaining their mutually cooperative and friendly relationship.

Greetings from the Chairman

Germany is a special country for all Koreans. During the tough post-war period, seed money was raised for national reconstruction through nurses and miners who were dispatched to Germany. Unlike neighboring countries that were in a rush to withdraw their investments in Korea during the 1997 Asian financial crisis, Germany increased its long-term investment with strong faith in the Korean economy. With aspirations for and experiences with reunification in common, we are sharing global economic power based on highly advanced IT-Technology and exports. In addition, more than 540 German companies that have entered the Korean market with over 100,000 employees are working hard to realize the common economic values of Korea and Germany.

Based on this special relationship between Korea and Germany, the Alumninetzwerk Deutschland-Korea (ADeKo) was established in 2006 with to the perspective of strengthening the solidarity of over 20,000 Korean alumni (including 5,000 Ph.D.) who studied in Germany and contributing to social development by improving the capabilities of members through mutual cooperation and encouragement, as well as promoting various exchanges and ultimately contributing to the practical social development of both countries.

Although it has drawn social attention through a variety of activities over the past 18 years, ADeKo is expected to play a much more important role this year, 2023, which marks the 140th anniversary of the establishment of Korea-Germany diplomatic ties. It will carry out an integrated academic conference in September, a special music concert in November, a high school sisterhood relationship program, and quarterly breakfast meetings. Starting next year, Alumni New Year's Eve and Year-End Concert will be annual traditions. The website has also been renovated to announce the various contributions and activities of many alumni, aiming to raise the status of ADeKo externally through outreach.

At a time when a new international order is required amid the rapidly changing global crisis, ADeKo will also take the initiative in helping Korea and Germany establish and lead a new global cooperation system as well as develop leadership in global civil society. ADeKo will establish itself as a pivotal organization linking Korea and Germany. ADeKo will be the future, dream, and hope of both countries.

I hope to see you at various events. Thank you.

Chairman of ADeKo
Prof. Dr. Hyo-Joon Kim

Greetings from related partners

Michael Reiffenstuel
Ambassador

German Embassy in Korea

Successful cooperation begins with personal relationships, and the German-Korean cooperation is no exception. It began 140 years ago, when the first German-Korean Trade, Friendship, and Shipping Agreement was signed in 1883 and continued when the Federal Republic of Germany sent a field hospital to Busan during the Korean War, which operated until 1959.

In the 1960s, 10,000 Korean nurses and 8,000 miners came to Germany, some of them stayed for good. The decades that followed saw an ever-growing number of students, scientists, cultural workers and many other people that lived, worked and travelled in Korea and in Germany. They all became ambassadors between our countries and they all form a living bond that still connects us today.

Developing personal relationships that is what ADeKo is all about. It provides a network in which friends of Germany and those familiar with Germany come together in Korea and meet like-minded people. Since its foundation more than 15 years ago, ADeKo has become a flagship for German-Korean cooperation in the field of science and research. Its annual science conferences ensure that the scientific exchange stays lively, up-to-date and – most importantly - reaches out to a new generation of ambassadors. Thanks to the tireless work of ADeKo, South Korea and Germany are more closely connected than ever before.

Dr. Hokyeong Rhee
Deputy Director

German Academic Exchange Service in Korea (DAAD)

On behalf of the DAAD(German Academic Exchange Service) in Korea, I would like to congratulate the Alumninetzwerk Deutschland – Korea(ADeKo) on its new leap forward. I would like to thank ADeKo Chairman Hyo - Joon Kim and the entire board of directors for their hard work and dedication to ensure a strong new start for ADeKo.

We are currently facing global challenges such as the ongoing war between Ukraine and Russia, the conflict between the United States and China, climate change, and refugees. Amid global challenges and changes that can never be solved in a conventional way, we must gather the talents and wisdom of the many alumni who studied in Germany to reshape the future we will live in together.

To this end, we will provide various opportunities for communication and meetings. With the assistance of German experts, we will navigate the post - COVID - 19 era together. We will support its future development, just as we did at the beginning of ADeKo. The DAAD will strive to be the best partner beyond the 'Pandemic Panic.'

Dr. Martin Henkelmann
President & CEO

Korean-German Chamber of Commerce and Industry

On behalf of the Korean-German Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KGCCI), I would like to once again congratulate Dr. Hyo-Joon Kim and the whole ADeKo Board for its election. I commend ADeKo's efforts in strengthening the relationship between Korea and Germany. As we celebrate the 140th anniversary of bilateral relations, it gives us great pleasure to acknowledge the invaluable role played by ADeKo in deepening the relationship between our countries in various sectors. Its efforts have not only enhanced the economic ties between Korea and Germany but also helped to foster cultural exchange and understanding.

This momentous occasion reminds us of the significance of the German community in Korea and their contribution to promoting German values in Korean society. The longstanding partnership between our two nations has laid the foundation for a strong and mutually beneficial relationship, which has been fostered by organizations such as ADeKo.

As the second-largest foreign chamber of commerce in Korea with a growing network of some 500 members, KGCCI is proud to be part of this community and eager to collaborate with ADeKo in promoting deeper friendship and cooperation between Korea and Germany. Once again congratulations to ADeKo and I look forward to continuing our partnership and a future filled with even stronger ties between our two countries.

Dr. Clemens Treter
Director

Goethe Institut Korea

On behalf of the Goethe-Institut Korea, I would like to extend our heartfelt congratulations to the Alumninetzwerk Deutschland-Korea (ADeKo) for its successful work. ADeKo has been a valuable partner for the Goethe-Institut Korea for many years, and we are pleased to see the contributions you have made to promoting cultural and academic exchange between our two countries. We are particularly proud of our long list of collaborations with ADeKo, especially in the context of the "Wissenschaftlicher Gesprächskreis" where we have exchanged ideas and insights on topics ranging from the 100th birthday of Bauhaus to the relation between man and nature. Members of the ADeKo-network have been partners of the Goethe-Institut on many occasions, their personal expertise and engagement is successfully building bridges between Korea and Germany. Our cooperation has led to a deepening of mutual understanding and a strengthening of cultural ties.

Furthermore, this year marks the 140th anniversary of diplomatic relations between Korea and Germany. It is a significant milestone, and we are thrilled to hear that ADeKo is planning a number of events, including a joint conference and a music concert, to celebrate this occasion. We are confident that these events will contribute to fostering even stronger relationships and more meaningful exchanges. Now that the pandemic restrictions have been nearly completely lifted, we look forward to continuing our partnership and working together to promote cultural exchange and understanding between Korea and Germany.

Young-Jin Kim
President

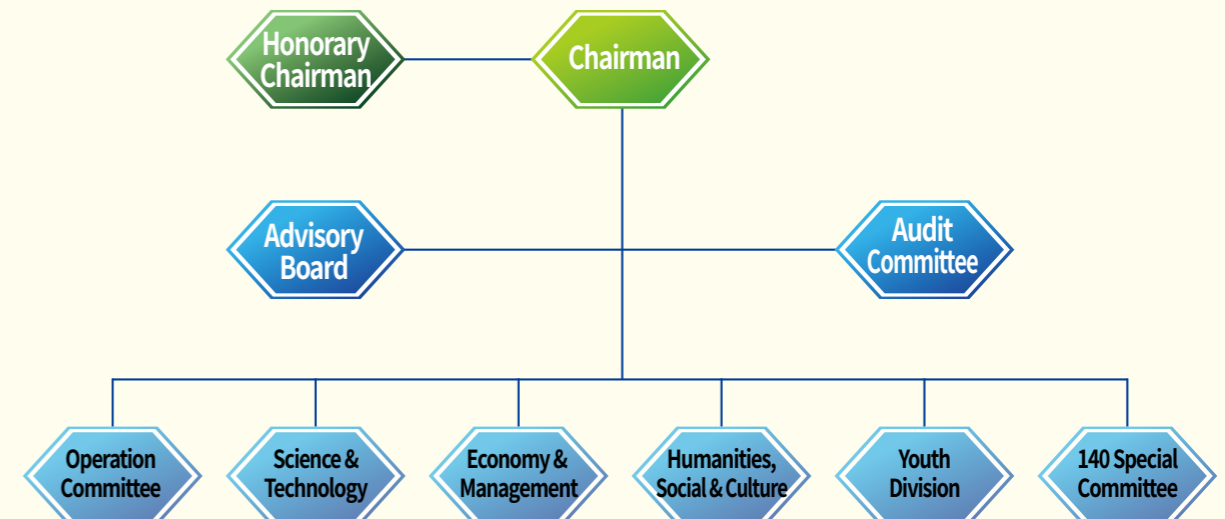

Koreanisch-Deutsche Gesellschaft

On October 24, 1883, a strange warship entered Jemulpo Port, now known as the Port of Incheon. Onboard the warship was a diplomatic delegation from Germany on its official visit to Korea, and the first meeting took place between complete strangers. 140 years have passed since this first awkward encounter, and today, the two nations are no longer strangers, but reliable partners who can think together constructively about the future ahead of us.

The relationship between Korea and Germany was not built automatically over the last 140 years. Historically, Korea and Germany have shared some similar experiences, including overcoming a painful history of war and national division, as well as achieving remarkable economic recovery and growth in the post-war era. Based on this connection and mutual understanding of history, the two nations have been intentional in their efforts to build the relationship. An awkward encounter that began for economic reasons 140 years ago have now expanded to exchanges in a variety of domains, including politics, culture, and academics. In particular, ADeKo has been important to promoting future-oriented and constructive engagement such as regular academic conferences and discussions to develop a more mature relationship between the two nations. ADeKo deserves much credit for its past efforts as well as its ongoing works to strengthen the relationship between Korea and Germany.

As the global landscape evolves rapidly, cooperation between nations is becoming ever more important. It is a source of great strength for Korea to maintain a partnership and friendship with strong allies such as Germany. As the relationship continues to flourish, the role and responsibility of ADeKo, which has served as a bridge between Korea and Germany, will also further grow and expand. We hope that ADeKo's vigorous efforts will continue to serve as an exemplary model for robust exchanges and cooperation between nations.

ADeKo Mission

Strengthen

Connect

ADeKo plays a role as a window of communication to strengthen exchanges between Korea and Germany, and to unite and reinforce the existing alumni associations of individual German universities. We also form a variety of human infrastructure by establishing cooperation and partnerships between various organizations such as government agencies, universities, research institutes, and companies in Korea and Germany.

Strengthen

ADeKo hosts international conferences, such as the Korean-German joint conference and the ADeKo symposium, where Korean and German experts from various fields gather together to discuss interests of both countries, and create a Korea-Germany knowledge community through regular academic meetings.

Support

ADeKo supports everyone who tries exchange and cooperation between the two countries through Stammtisch, ADeKo Junge Alumni Nacht, Korea-Germany cultural experience, field trip, etc., and set the stage for fostering excellent academic people and networking elites at universities in both countries. In addition, we provide unstinting support to discover excellent research personnel for Korean and German companies.
